Index to Volume 41

Babrow, A. S. (1990). Audience motivation, viewing context, media content, and form: The interactional emergence of soap opera entertainment. Communication Studies, 41, 343–361.

Barge, J. K., Schlueter, D. W., & Duncan, G. (1990). Task structure as a moderator of task and relational skills. Communication Studies, 41, 1–18.

Benoit, W. L. (1990). Campbell's The Philosophy of Rhetoric and the advancement of rhetorical theory: The integration of philosophical antecedents. Communication Studies, 41, 89–100.

Brummett, B. (1990). How to propose a discourse: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 128–135.

Burleson, B. R. (See Samter, W.)

Cragan, J. F., & Wright, D. W. (1990). Small group communication research of the 1980s: A synthesis and critique. Communication Studies, 41, 212–236.

Dionisopoulos, G. N. (See Guerrero, L. K.)

Dowling, R. E., & Flint, L. J. (1990). The argumentativeness scale: Problems and promise. Communication Studies, 41, 183–198.

Duncan, G. (See Barge, J. K.)

Flint, L. J. (See Dowling, R. E.)

Guerrero, L. K., & Dionisopoulos, G. N. (1990). Enthymematic solutions to the Lockshin defection story: A case study in the repair of a problematic narrative. Communication Studies, 41, 299–310.

Hosman, L. A. (See Wright, J. W.)

Meyer, J. (1990). Ronald Reagan and humor: A politician's velvet weapon. Communication Studies, 41, 76–88.

On mythic criticism: The conversation continues. (1990). Communication Studies, 41, 278–298.

Osborn, M. (1990). In defense of broad mythic criticism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 121–127.

Owen, W. F. (1990). Delimiting relational metaphors. Communication Studies, 41, 35–53.

Poole, M. S. (1990). Do we have any theories of group communication? Communication Studies, 41, 237–247.

Putnam, L. L., & Stohl, C. (1990). Bona fide groups: A reconceptualization of groups in context. Communication Studies, 41, 248–265.

Rademacher, T. (See Rowland, R. C.)

Rowland, R. C. (1990). On mythic criticism. Communication Studies, 41, 101–116.

Rowland, R. C. (1990). On a limited approach to mythic criticism: Rowland's rejoinder. Communication Studies, 41, 150–160.

Rowland, R. C., & Rademacher, T. (1990). The passive style of rhetorical crisis management: A case study of the superfund controversy. Communication Studies, 41, 327–342.

Rushing, J. H. (1990). On saving mythic criticism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 136–149.

Samter, W., & Burleson, B. R. (1990). Evaluations of communication skills as predictors of peer acceptance in a group living situation. Communication Studies, 41, 311–326.

Schlueter, D. W. (See Barge, J. K.)

Sharkey, W. F., & Stafford, L. (1990). Turn–taking resources employed by congenitally blind conversers. Communication Studies, 41, 161–182.

Smith, L. D. (1990). Convention oratory as institutional discourse: A narrative synthesis of the Democrats and Republicans of 1988. Communication Studies, 41, 19–34.

Solomon, M. (1990). Responding to Rowland's myth or in defense of pluralism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 117–120.

Stafford, L. (See Sharkey, W. F.)

Stohl, C. (See Putnam, L. L.)

Sykes, R. E. (1990). Imagining what we might study if we really studied small groups from a speech perspective. Communication Studies, 41, 200–211.

Turner, D. B. (1990). Intraorganizational bargaining: The effect of goal congruence and trust on negotiator strategy use. Communication Studies, 41, 54–75.

Wright, D. W. (See Cragan, J. F.)

Wright, J. W., & Hosman, L. A. (1990). Deregulation and public perceptions of television: A longitudinal study. Communication Studies 41, 266–277.

Index to Volume 41

Babrow, A. S. (1990). Audience motivation, viewing context, media content, and form: The interactional emergence of soap opera entertainment. Communication Studies, 41, 343–361.

Barge, J. K., Schlueter, D. W., & Duncan, G. (1990). Task structure as a moderator of task and relational skills. Communication Studies, 41, 1–18.

Benoit, W. L. (1990). Campbell's The Philosophy of Rhetoric and the advancement of rhetorical theory: The integration of philosophical antecedents. Communication Studies, 41, 89–100.

Brummett, B. (1990). How to propose a discourse: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 128–135.

Burleson, B. R. (See Samter, W.)

Cragan, J. F., & Wright, D. W. (1990). Small group communication research of the 1980s: A synthesis and critique. Communication Studies, 41, 212–236.

Dionisopoulos, G. N. (See Guerrero, L. K.)

Dowling, R. E., & Flint, L. J. (1990). The argumentativeness scale: Problems and promise. Communication Studies, 41, 183–198.

Duncan, G. (See Barge, J. K.)

Flint, L. J. (See Dowling, R. E.)

Guerrero, L. K., & Dionisopoulos, G. N. (1990). Enthymematic solutions to the Lockshin defection story: A case study in the repair of a problematic narrative. Communication Studies, 41, 299–310.

Hosman, L. A. (See Wright, J. W.)

Meyer, J. (1990). Ronald Reagan and humor: A politician's velvet weapon. Communication Studies, 41, 76–88.

On mythic criticism: The conversation continues. (1990). Communication Studies, 41, 278–298.

Osborn, M. (1990). In defense of broad mythic criticism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 121–127.

Owen, W. F. (1990). Delimiting relational metaphors. Communication Studies, 41, 35–53.

Poole, M. S. (1990). Do we have any theories of group communication? Communication Studies, 41, 237–247.

Putnam, L. L., & Stohl, C. (1990). Bona fide groups: A reconceptualization of groups in context. Communication Studies, 41, 248–265.

Rademacher, T. (See Rowland, R. C.)

Rowland, R. C. (1990). On mythic criticism. Communication Studies, 41, 101–116.

Rowland, R. C. (1990). On a limited approach to mythic criticism: Rowland's rejoinder. Communication Studies, 41, 150–160.

Rowland, R. C., & Rademacher, T. (1990). The passive style of rhetorical crisis management: A case study of the superfund controversy. Communication Studies, 41, 327–342.

Rushing, J. H. (1990). On saving mythic criticism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 136–149.

Samter, W., & Burleson, B. R. (1990). Evaluations of communication skills as predictors of peer acceptance in a group living situation. Communication Studies, 41, 311–326.

Schlueter, D. W. (See Barge, J. K.)

Sharkey, W. F., & Stafford, L. (1990). Turn–taking resources employed by congenitally blind conversers. Communication Studies, 41, 161–182.

Smith, L. D. (1990). Convention oratory as institutional discourse: A narrative synthesis of the Democrats and Republicans of 1988. Communication Studies, 41, 19–34.

Solomon, M. (1990). Responding to Rowland's myth or in defense of pluralism: A reply to Rowland. Communication Studies, 41, 117–120.

Stafford, L. (See Sharkey, W. F.)

Stohl, C. (See Putnam, L. L.)

Sykes, R. E. (1990). Imagining what we might study if we really studied small groups from a speech perspective. Communication Studies, 41, 200–211.

Turner, D. B. (1990). Intraorganizational bargaining: The effect of goal congruence and trust on negotiator strategy use. Communication Studies, 41, 54–75.

Wright, D. W. (See Cragan, J. F.)

Wright, J. W., & Hosman, L. A. (1990). Deregulation and public perceptions of television: A longitudinal study. Communication Studies 41, 266–277.